SUSTAINABLE FOREST MANAGEMENT FOR NATURE-BASED SOLUTIONS

- Rehabilitating degraded forests and managing forests sustainably serve as nature-based solutions for climate change adaptation, aiding disaster risk reduction and providing sustainable livelihoods.
- Japan, with its rich forests and experience in disaster prevention, has supported sustainable forest management in developing countries. It has developed forest-based disaster risk reduction technologies, such as mountain disaster risk maps and mangrove forest protection.
- The seminar will explore forest-based climate adaptation, with speakers from various sectors sharing insights and discussing reforestation and climate initiatives in developing countries.
